

Area Highlights

Little Lost Creek Conservation Area is in the Missouri River hills of central Warren County. It is 5 miles south of Pendleton on Route B. The 2,899-acre area consists mostly of oak/hickory forest with scattered glades, savannas and fields, and is named for the creek that meanders through the area's deep valleys and rugged hills, affording several scenic overlooks. A fall hike through the area provides visitors with dazzling displays of fall color. Woodland wildlife, such as deer, turkey and ruffed grouse, are year-round residents. The area also provides an important stopping point for numerous neotropical migrant songbirds. Management focuses on restoring and maintaining healthy natural communities which support an impressive diversity of plants and animals. Facilities/features: primitive camping/picnicking and a 5-mile multi-use trail.
